Writing a literature review

- What is a literature review?
 - A critical summary of what has been published on a topic
 - What is already known about the topic
 - Strengths and weaknesses of previous studies
 - Often part of the introduction or a section of a research paper, proposal, or thesis
- A literature review should
 - be organized around and related directly to your research question
 - synthesize results into a summary of what is and is not known
 - identify areas of controversy in the literature
 - formulate questions that need further research

Dena Taylor and Margaret Procter. 2004. The literature review: A few tips on conducting it. http://www.writing.utoronto.ca/advice/specific-types-of-writing/literature-review

Literature review do's + don'ts

- Don't create a list of article summaries or quotes
- Do point out what is most relevant about each article to your paper
- Do compare and contrast the articles you review
- Do highlight controversies raised or questions left unanswered by the articles you review
- Do take a look at some examples of literature reviews or related work sections before you try to create one yourself
 - See for example section 2 of http://cups.cs.cmu.edu/soups/2013/proceedings/a7_Leon.pdf or http://cups.cs.cmu.edu/soups/2013/proceedings/a12_Balebako.pdf

Course project

Project overview

- Group project teams of 3 to 6 students
 - In 2 weeks we will survey you about your preference in project and anyone you want to work with and will assign teams
- Pick a project from the list of suggested projects or propose something new (please discuss with instructors)
- All projects have final paper and poster as deliverable
- Some projects may have other deliverables such as software, user interface designs, etc.
- http://cups.cs.cmu.edu/courses/pplt-fa14/project.html

Past projects

- Past course websites have information about past projects
- Several past projects have been turned into a thesis or published paper, some software projects have been released publicly or contributed to open source projects
 - And you are encouraged to think about that too
